

LIBERAL/LIBERAL DEMOCRAT CANDIDATES IN THE SOUTH WEST REGION 1945-2015

Constituencies in the counties of Dorset, Gloucestershire, Somerset and Wiltshire

INCLUDING SDP CANDIDATES in the GENERAL ELECTIONS of 1983 and 1987

PREFACE

The Index for the South West Region has been relatively straightforward to compile compared with some others. Many of the constituencies have been contested repeatedly by the same candidates over several elections. Some of those elected to Westminster remained MPs over three or more parliaments. There have been surprisingly few 'single contest' candidates. Few constituencies have been left uncontested for long even in the most barren periods in party fortunes. Another helpful factor has been the small number of changes of constituency names. In excess of 30 candidates have fought constituencies in other regions. Though the region has not been over endowed with eminent party figures, several outstanding personalities, including a former party leader, are afforded extended entries.

THE MARTELL PLAN

The Martell Plan, mentioned in passing throughout the regional directories was the electoral strategy adopted by the Liberal Party for the General Election of 1950. It was first named after Edward Martell qv (Greater London), a party 'grandee' of the immediate post-war years who advocated the nomination of over 150 additional candidates in constituencies which had little or no Liberal organization nor history of Liberal activity in recent years. Most were adopted less than two months before nomination day, many at the eleventh hour, Martell's objective being to increase the Liberal challenge to a level at which the party would be enabled to form a government, presuming enough MPs were elected.

Martell and his supporters, among them many younger party members including Jeremy Thorpe, Isaac Hyam qqv, believed that a steadily growing number of adoptions being announced in the media would create a momentum of its own in the minds of the electorate. The majority of the constituencies involved were in urban areas of Greater London, the North West, South East, Scotland and the West Midland Regions, though other regions were involved to lesser degree. Quixotically, a considerable number of largely rural constituencies went uncontested where a Liberal candidate might have fared reasonably well, judging upon results obtained at the 1945 General Election. The final national tally of candidates, a fair proportion of them of dubious Liberal pedigree, was over 450. The party lost over 300 deposits, though without contemporary records of Liberal associations, or regional parties, covering the period, it is now impossible to differentiate technically between a 'Martell Plan Candidate' and a candidate, albeit in an unpromising constituency, adopted following more formal procedures, well in advance of nomination day. An enormous percentage of the Martell Plan candidates were among those to lose their deposits of £150, then set at 12 1/2% of votes cast. Fortunately provision had been made for some measure of insurance cover with Lloyds in the City of London against this contingency.

The goal of fighting every mainland constituency in the UK was finally achieved 25 years later under the leadership of Jeremy Thorpe at the General Election of October 1974. The broad front was reduced, marginally, at the following election of 1979. In both 1983 and 1987 the Liberals and their allies, the SDP, each contested roughly 50% of the UK parliamentary constituencies, avoiding contests against each other save in a handful of cases. Since 1992 the Liberal Democrats have contested every constituency in mainland UK, save for that held by The Speaker and a handful of other instances, at every successive general election. In recent times party nominees who are nominated at the last minute in unpromising constituencies, simply to show the flag, have come to be termed 'paper candidates.' Virtually every candidate at recent general elections, however, has been approved by the party's parliamentary candidates' committee and adopted according to formal procedure.

The scale of defeat for the Liberal Party in the 1950 General Election, in which nine Liberal MPs were elected, was eclipsed by the debacle of 2015 when only eight of the previously held 57 constituencies returned a Liberal Democrat MP. No less than 340 of 631 deposits were forfeited, £170,000, at the current rate of £500, with the threshold at 5% of votes cast. No deposits had been lost by the party at the General Election of 2010.

ASHDOWN, Lord John Jeremy D., (Paddy) PC, b 1941 New Delhi, India, where his father was a professional soldier; ed Bedford s., Language School, Hong Kong; polyglot linguist; service Royal Marines 1959-72, on active duty in Borneo, Belfast etc; was in his day one of the very last MPs to have had combat experience; Foreign Office 1971-76, with Senior Intelligence MI6, First Sec British Mission, UN Geneva; later Westland Helicopters 1976-78, general man, Morlands 1978-81, Dorset CC officer 1981-83.

Originally a Labour supporter, Paddy Ashdown joined the Liberals in 1975 and was elected MP in 1979. He soon became party Commons spokesman on Trade and Industry, later Education, Science and Northern Ireland. He became the first leader of the merged party, styled the Liberal Democrats, 1988-1999. Starting from the absolute nadir of public support, he lifted the party to a new peak of success in terms of MPs elected, eventually leading the party greater in numbers than at any time since the 1920s. An approachable, listening and caring individual, he attracted wide support for the new party, impressing the party rank-and-file with his inexhaustible energy, keen sense of humour and optimism. Deep-thinking, with a remarkable gift for predicting the outcome of mistaken government policy decisions, he was often unjustly accused in the media of addressing the House of Commons as if delivering a sermon. Critics also unnecessarily dwelt upon his habit, an indication of his intense concentration, of closing his eye lids to slits while delivering an address. He early on declared himself opposed to the deployment of cruise missiles.

After the 1992 General Election, despairing at the likelihood of a fifth Conservative victory in succession, Paddy approached the then Labour Opposition Leader, John Smith, on possible closer cooperation between the two parties. Smith showed no interest. After the untimely death of the latter, Paddy approached his successor, Tony Blair, who was amenable. 'Realignment of the left' had been advocated in vain over 25 years earlier by party ldr Jo Grimond qv (Scotland). Discrete negotiations, subsequently referred to as 'the project,' continued over a long period on limited local agreements on tactical withdrawal of candidates at by-elections, common policies, PR etc. The emphatic Labour victory at the 1997 General Election brought an abrupt end to the 'the project.' He was awarded the honour of KBE 2000 and a Peerage 2001, giving way as party leader to Charles Kennedy qv (Scotland).

Paddy Ashdown had made repeated warnings about the deteriorating situation arising from the breakup of the former Yugoslavia, calling for concerted action by Europe and NATO to prevent genocide and a bloodbath. He emphasised that the carnage of World War I had occurred as a result of an outrage in the Balkans city of Sarajevo and that Europe could not ignore what was happening on its doorstep. During the escalating tragedy he was appointed U.N. High Representative in Bosnia Herzegovina 2002-06, despite being in grave personal danger throughout, he successfully brought the warring parties to negotiating table. He was later to testify in the war crimes trial of the notorious Slobodan Milosevich.

He has maintained a high-profile in the Lords, the country and in the media, where he distinguished himself with the public with his conciliatory, non-confrontational style of debate. He was awarded with further honours of GCMG 2006 and CH 2015. Appointed party campaign director in advance of the 2015 General Election, some of his decisions during the campaign were strongly criticised. His media tribute to Nick Clegg's leadership immediately after the disastrous results of the local government and European Elections in 2014, did much to restore party morale though some elements in the press continue to make vicious personal attacks upon him. There were reports that while PM, Gordon Brown offered him a Cabinet post within the Labour Government as Northern Ireland Secretary c2007 which the party Idr Ming Campbell qv (Scotland) is said to have advised him to decline. When exit poll predictions that the Lib Dems would retain only ten MPs were made in the TV studio coverage of the results at the General Election, May 2015, Paddy retorted "I'll eat my hat!" a promise which he fulfilled later by publicly consuming a specially prepared chocolate hat. His Diaries 1988-97 (pub Allen Lane 2001) contain full details of his negotiations over 'the project' with Blair and make for compelling reading. His autobiography A Fortunate Life (pub Aurum 2010) was widely acclaimed, as were two books on episodes in World War II, A Brilliant Little Operation (Aurum, 2012) and The Cruel Victory (Collins, 2014); Yeovil, 1979, 1983, 1987, 1992, 1997; MP 1983-2001; See Dictionary of Liberal Biography

Liberal Action, later Radical Action; contested Chippenham by-election 1943 as an Independent Liberal, the leadership officially endorsing his Conservative opponent (as per the terms of the wartime truce); mbr Society for Individual Freedom; he harboured great resentment, justly attributing his defeat by only 195 votes to Sinclair's failure to support him; after contesting Chippenham again at the first post-war General Election 1945, left party through 'disappointment at hopelessness of Liberals,' to join Conservatives; fought Carlisle for that party 1955, 1959, (MP 1955-64) in Commons showed himself something of a maverick and individualist, often abstaining or voting against his party; campaigned for improved psychiatric services within National Health Service, drawing attention to plight of elderly people unjustly committed to asylums; was first MP to raise the idea of appointing an Ombudsman 1959; supported the re-introduction of corporal punishment; his rebelliousness resulted in his de-selection as candidate at Carlisle; resigned whip in 1963 over MacMillan's handling of Profumo affair; a proposal he made in the Commons at this point for the introduction STV in parliamentary elections was predictably rejected; fought as Ind Conservative
